Kyoto-Bristol workshop for PhD students in experimental psychology

January 14, 2014
Lecture Room 1, Graduate School of Letters, Kyoto University

15:00 Opening
15:10 Kiyofumi Miyoshi (Graduate School of Letters, Kyoto University): implicit memory and perceptual representation.
15:30 Tomoaki Nakazono (Graduate School of Letters, Kyoto University): Rule switching affects oscillations in rat hippocampus.
15:50 Toshiyuki Himichi (Graduate School of Education, Kyoto University): Interaction of gene and emotional state on inferring of other’s mind: Oxytocin gene polymorphism modulates effect of psychological stress.
16:10 Coffee Break
16:30 Olivia Matthews (School of Experimental Psychology, University of Bristol): Human visual search performance for camouflaged targets.
16:50 László Tálas (School of Experimental Psychology, University of Bristol): Concealment constrained by culture: the evolution of human camouflage.
17:10 General Discussion
17:30 Closing

Organisers
Yoshio Sakurai, Hiroshi Ashida, Michio Nomura (Kyoto University)
Nick Scott-Samuel, Ute Leonards (University of Bristol)

Supported by
Support for University Education Reform throughout National, Public, and Private Universities - Improvement of graduate education, MEXT, Japan, for Graduate School of Education, Graduate School of Letters (文部科学省・平成 25 年度卓越した大学院拠点形成支援補助金) (Kyoto University)
EPSRC Building Global Engagements in Research (University of Bristol)